Abstract

The writing of the grammar of a natural and in-use language constitutes a scientific endeavor with crucial linguistic-communicative as well as socio-historical parameters, as language, as a diachronic and synchronic carrier of culture, continuously shapes societies and contributes both as a cause and effect to the perpetuation of the identity of nations. The practical accomplishment of drafting this Romanian Grammar was associated with a strong sense of my scientific and teaching responsibility as a native Romanian speaker, as a teacher and academic facing potential students and educators, and generally, those immersed in a beautiful, lively, yet intricate language. The drafting of the proposed Romanian

Language Grammar comes to fill the significant gap compared to other languages for which there are many learning aids, with the belief that this will be a significant support for all those taking their first steps in learning the Romanian Language. This book is aimed at undergraduate and postgraduate students, and not only, who are learning the Romanian Language, regardless of their level, in order to acquire the corresponding theoretical and practical background. It can be used by both unfamiliar readers and readers with advanced knowledge of the Romanian Language. Teachers, students, learners, and professionals can find in this book the necessary material for learning the Romanian Language.
